WOULD PRESERVE PICTURES SHOWING OLD WASHINGTON

Association of Oldest Inhabitants Will Photograph Historical Buildings.

In order that views of old Washington may be preserved, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia will take photographs of historic buildings that are likely to be torn down.

Decision to begin this practice was reached at a meeting of the association in Union engine house, 19th and H streets, last night. On motion of Dr. Thomas Calver, the chronicler, Capt. George W. Evans was charged with the duty of getting the pictures.

Henry K. Willard's Offer.
Henry K. Willard offered to start the collection with photographs of the old Willard Hotel, old Willard Hotel, and the Daniel Webster house at Connecticut avenue and H street, which is now the site of the new home of the United States Chamber of Commerce. The question of saving photographs of these relics of the early days of Washington was brought up by Mr. Willard, who deplored the tearing down of All Souls' Church, 13th and L streets, to make way for a modern commercial structure.

Mr. Willard told the oldest inhabitants he fought the rest of the congregation on the proposal to build a new church in one of the outlying sections. He failed to win the plan, he said, because many of the present members of the congregation are unfamiliar with the history of the edifice.

"I had hoped," said Mr. Willard, "that All Souls' Church would be preserved as one of the downtown churches, like St. John's and the Church of the Epiphany."

Story of All Souls' Church.
Mr. Willard then recited the story of how All Souls' Church was started and built, how his father went around collecting nearly all of the contributions with which it was erected and how the first services were held in the Willard residence at 1323 K street.

Publication yesterday of the fact that the Willard Hotel had changed hands led Mr. Willard to relate the story of how his father reopened the old City Hotel under the name of Willard's Hotel in 1847. Prior to that time the senior Mr. Willard had been steward on a New York boat, the Niagara.

Mr. Willard, who is one of the vice presidents of the association, also gave a brief account of an automobile tour he made recently of the western states.

Members Asked to Help.
During discussion of the plan to take photographs of old buildings William McNair suggested that every member of the association should put in writing and file with the association interesting stories he remembers of old Washington.

Mr. McNair said there are only a few worth-while collections from which a historian could prepare an authentic account of old Washington. No group of men, he said, are as well fitted to preserve for future generations the history of early Washington as the members of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Mr. Evans said he is keeping scrapbooks of all newspaper stories which appear about old buildings or references to the early days of the District. He was applauded when he announced that these scrap books would some day become the property of the association.

Three New Members.
Three new members were elected: Charles W. Gwynne, 131 A street northeast; Gustav Voigt, 802 H street; and William E. Schree, 201 I street.

John Clagett Proctor brought painful memories to his associates when he read a paper on "The High Cost of Living—Past and Present." It read, in part, as follows:

Days When Living Was Cheap.
Since the chief topic of the day is the high cost of living, it might be of great interest to know that there was a time at least when the necessities of life, and luxuries too, for that matter, could be had without drawing on one's bank account or without becoming bankrupt entirely by the purchase of those things which go toward making up for the pleasures and comforts of our earthly existence.

"As Washington is now, along with the rest of the republic, as dry as powder, it will be of especial interest to the thirsty and perhaps heated, offer some consolation to them, to know that there was a time when one could get a dinner at a first-class hotel in Washington, with a bottle of brandy or whiskey to wash it down, without extra charge, for the liberal price of 75 cents. This was at Brown's Indian Queen Hotel, now the Metropolitan, where transients were once served with breakfast and supper for 50 cents each and dinner for 75 cents, with refreshments. If you had a Sir John Falstaff capacity, and were able to afterward attend the bar, the jovial dispenser of liquid concoctions would serve you with a bottle of real old brandy, imported into Alexandria, for three dollars; sherry, brandy and gin could be had for $1.50 a bottle each, and a bottle of Jamaica rum for as low as $1. Mint juleps were 12 cents each, and the XX ale served came from a brewery then on the banks of Rock creek. If you did not mind walking the distance in those days, you could take a little brown jug along and obtain a real gallon of "red-eye" at Bladenburg for the almost unbelievable price of 60 cents.

Steak—12 1-2 Cents a Pound!
"However, if your appetite did not run in this direction, but for the more substantial things of life, you could go to the Marsh market (now the Center market) and get a nice steak for from 6 to 12 cents a pound. Mutton could be had for from 5 to 10 cents a pound; lamb, 50 to 75 cents a quarter; wild turkey, 75 cents each; tame turkey, $1.25 to $1.50; geese, 75 cents each; shad, 60 cents a pair; perch, 25 cents a bunch; butter, 20 cents a pound; eggs, 18 cents a dozen; potatoes, 10 cents a bushel; corn, 65 cents a bushel; meal, 65 cents a bushel; a peck. This was along about 1841.

"A few years earlier than this the price for beef was 3 to 4 cents a pound; mutton, 5 to 7; pork, 6 to 8; chickens, 25 to 62 cents a pair; ducks, game, blackbirds, 6 to 8 cents a pound; sea bass, 5 to 7; lobsters, 6 to 8 cents each; white potatoes, 30 to 40 cents a bushel; turnips, 2 to 5 cents a peck; carrots, the same; beets, 4 to 6; cabbage, 3 to 4 cents each; cucumbers, 2 cents a piece; watermelons, 4 to 16 cents; muskmelons, 3 to 5 cents; pineapples, 25 cents each. Wood at that period was generally burned as fuel, for which one paid, during mild weather, 34 a cord, and in severe weather, 36 to 37.

Imported Coal From England.
"Some of the diplomats then residing in Washington are said to have used 'sea coal,' imported from England, for their special use. Lehigh coal not having been introduced here until 1825, and it was then quite scarce and high priced.

"The canvas-back duck, which was so plentiful on Masons or Annapolis Island, could then be bought for six cents each, and during the civil war two Union prisoners captured by Early's army paid at Tennytown 50 cents a pound for cream cheese, 16 cents for sugar, 60 cents for butter, 30 cents for tea and 16 1/2 cents a pound for ham, the cheese, butter and sugar being almost at present-day prices.

"House rent was not so bad once upon a time, since a two-story house 25x30 feet square, rented for $200 a year, or a little less than $17 dollars a month.

"If you happened to want a physician in the good old days, you paid a dollar a visit, if you were fortunate enough to live near his office; otherwise you paid $5 a visit to and within the distance of ten miles. If you were ordered to the hospital along about 1866 you could be accommodated at Providence in a private room from $7 to $10 a week, according to the nature of the disease, and if you could not stand the tariff you could go into a general ward for $4.

"Although the sanitary conditions were not then what they are today, still people managed to take an occasional bath, and, if for this purpose they cared to wander down to Alexandria, they could be accommodated at 50 cents a peck."

Hindenburg Statue Seized.
BERLIN, May 5.—The colossal Hindenburg war statue standing in front of the reichstag, which after the war passed into private ownership, has been provisionally confiscated by the police. This action was taken, it is declared, to prevent the possibility of disorders in the event of its being removed from Germany.

RUTH GUEST OF HONOR.

Red Cross' New Manager Makes an Address.

Thomas De C. Ruth, recently appointed manager of the Potomac division, American Red Cross, was the guest of honor of the chairman of the various auxiliaries of the District of Columbia Red Cross chapter yesterday at 16 Jackson place. Mrs. A. O. Powell, director of women's work, presided.

Mr. Ruth spoke on "The Peace-time Program of the American Red Cross and What Its Chapters in Large Cities Can Do to Further It." He pointed out that it is a vital matter at the present time, when the great relief organization is devoting the greater part of its energies toward the public health. He said there are more than 75,000 members in the District chapter, which is one of the most active chapters in the United States keeping up as it does its women's work, comforts section, supply can- teen, clerical, motor and nursing corps, diet kitchen, volunteer aids and welfare work at Walter Reed, St. Elizabeth's, the Naval, the public health service and the various hospitals in the District.

Although only two peaks of the Alps are more than 15,000 feet in height, there are dozens exceeding 12,000 feet.
